

Castaic Lake

FISHING REPORT

WEEK ENDING 09/19/2010

WATER TEMP: 70 to 77

LOWER LAKE Trout Plant: 01/12/2010

UPPER LAKE Main Ramp 3100 lbs: 05/24/2010

Shad Shad Shad! The shad are being spotted all over the lake and are netable at the marina in the back of most coves and there are even some really big 4 inch shad in the mix too. The stripers and largies have been terrorizing the shad and tormenting the anglers for the past couple of weeks now. Spooks Sammy's Poppers and other top water baits are the killers for the boiling stripers. For the largies hanging in the backs of the coves Flukes and little shad shaped minnows are slaying the largies from Elizabeth Cyn to the Marina and over by Kong Island. During the first 20 or 30 minutes the lake is open, if you're lucky, you might run into a big striper boil right behind you boat as your launching. The stripers have been boiling at the Main Ramp almost every day around the clock. There are a few largie boils but the stripers really dominate the area. The action at the buoy line has been hit or miss recently. The bait bite has been really inconsistent day to day but when it's good it's really good and if it's bad just target the boils. The west ramp shoreline has been producing some bigger fish around 7 to 14 pounds for some of the lucky anglers hooking into these stripers in the early morning hours. The late evening has been really good as well. The lagoon fishing is still doing pretty well for the largies and cats and the night crawlers are still the baits of choice for both the upper and lower lakes.
